A Must-Have List for Aesthetic Bookworms

Every so often I receive new books devoted to aesthetic medicine, and I am pleasantly surprised over how much is available to aesthetic practitioners in book form. In addition, quite a few new books are now published in the new Kindle format for those who use the new handheld book reader from Amazon.

To help you navigate the seemingly endless lists of new tomes about to hit the shelves, here are some titles to watch for:

The New Face: A High Definition Customized Approach to Natural Rejuvenation (MDPublish.com), by Sam S. Rizk, MD, FACS, is scheduled for September 2009 release. It promises to offer a completely new approach to facial rejuvenation. Rizk takes on established methods and offers a fresh alternative to the "facelifted," wind-swept postop look that has turned off so many people.
